EXECUTIVE PRIVILEGE A rendering of one of the new Beverly Hills Hotel presidential bungalows

Beverly Thrills!

9021-whoa! This month, the storied Beverly Hills Hotel unveils two new 5,500-square-foot presidential bungalows. They'll join the Pink Palace's existing 23 couture cottages, which have long seduced Liz Taylor, who honeymooned with six of her eight hubbies in the luxe love shacks. Each of the not-so-humble new abodes boasts three bedrooms and three and a half baths, as well as a chef's kitchen, great room, study, private gardens, patios, outdoor shower and waterfall-edged swimming pool. Behind a wrought-iron gate inspired by the hotel's iconic banana leaf wallpaper, look for a palm tree homage by Claes Oldenburg and bathroom vanities Joan Crawford would have loved, not to mention fireplaces in every room (outside too). All of this was envisioned by architect and designer Lauren Rottet, whose furnishing selections—'30s-inspired chandeliers, '40s-inspired sofas—are meant to dovetail with the hotel's overall vibe. "It's like no other place in the world," she says. Lost to construction is the property's seldom utilized pair of tennis courts. No need to raise a racket over the change, though, explains the hotel's general manager Alberto del Hoyo: "We offer complimentary limousine transportation to nearby courts at the La Cienega Tennis Center." Rooms from $9,000, beverlyhillshotel.com —Andrew Myers

PRETTY PAD Le Posh spa and salon in Beverly Hills

BEAUTY CALL

Best Tressed

Whether you're lopping off your locks or just seeking a few waves for a big night out, one of these newcomers on the styling scene is sure to have you covered. Sally Hershberger has just opened a styling-only studio at the SLS Hotel (465 S. La Cienega Blvd., 310.246.5560), where $85 blowouts and $150 updos will be on tap. And those looking for a more dramatic change now have a better chance of booking on the fly—her long-standing WeHo flagship (760 N. La Cienega Blvd., 310.854.4922) has just doubled in size. >>>

There's a new creative director at Sassoon Salon in Beverly Hills (9403 Little Santa Monica Blvd., 310.274.8791): Jeremy Davies-Barbala, who hails from London. In addition to a charming accent, Davies-Barbala brings with him a new "collection" (in other words, a trove of new styling techniques and inspiration bestowed upon Sassoon staffers each season). For spring, it's all about sexy Parisian insouciance with an architectural twist. >>> At the freshly opened Le Posh spa and salon (7551 W. Sunset Blvd., 323.851.5558), the fun doesn't have to stop after your highlights and mani are done. We recommend heading up to the rooftop yoga studio for an open-air session with McKenna Rowe, then booking a signature massage and body wrap with Ticia Andres—a treatment that somehow manages to both pep you up and calm you down. —Erin Magner
